

After drawing around the board, I flipped it, allowed a little extra space and continued drawing the pattern. My plan is to fold the fabric and just sew 2 seams up the sides.

The long piece is left from cutting. I'll use it to make the pockets. I cut out the fabric with pinking shears as this fabric is likely to fray and I'm not going to do fold over seams.

Midway, I changed up how I do the pockets. Measure for size against the item. I made two wide sections to run across the main piece so it will be attached with the side seams.

Then I marked where I want the pockets to divide.

I made a set of pockets for each side of the organizer. Now I have plenty of pockets for the small items and the entire thing pulls out of the backpack, giving me easy access to all these items.

By Kate Buike, 9 July 2014
Red Harp Arts <http://redharparts.wordpress.com/>

mkbuike at aol dot com